Our History is all about Quality

This pithy little ad was placed in a church Sunday bulletin in Sioux City around 1915, when we were a residential coal and building supply seller. Our founder Lucius Garland was a gentleman who knew what quality coal looked (and burned) like. What's striking is that he was able to get excited about something as commonplace as lumps of coal and persuade people to buy from him and not the other guy down the block. We can describe the very same concept of not being able to sell a second-class (think cheap, out-of-spec, or just plain dirty) load of material in today's world. If we were to sell and deliver a bad load of concrete or a dirty load of rip-rap, our customer wouldn't just be disappointed or angry, they may never buy from us again.

We are fortunate that we have been able to build on his reputation for quality over the last 110 years and four generations. Of course, it's the hundred little details that ensure a quality product to go out the gate or over the scale. Our brand image is the orange and white checkerboard logo, along with the Myrl and Roy's, Ace and D&I logos. Whenever people see any one of them, we want them to think of us as a quality place to do business with, with a company that provides solutions!.

Reducing Stress To Support Employees

Stress can come in many shapes and sizes and from many different reasons. To help employees cope with chronic stress, it is important to foster a supportive culture that normalizes mental health and seeking help. Provide safe spaces for open conversations and encourage use of counseling or virtual mental health services. Recognize and reward hard work to help employees feel valued. Ensure workloads are manageable through clear communication and regular check-ins. Finally, promote mental breaks when possible to move, eat, or rest for a short period.
