Equipment Updates, Accounting Style

Written by Chad Hartman, Controller

I always enjoy reading the Roxsand and hearing about the upgrades to our plants, the new layouts, and the shiny new equipment. It may not be quite the same thing, but the accounting department is in the process of updating our own equipment to improve efficiencies.

Much like planning a new location or site layout, we have been researching, planning, and designing the new system for over a year. Throughout this, we tried to keep all aspects of our business in mind. The goal is not to just replace and upgrade the accounting software, but rather implement an Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) system that will encompass many areas of our business.

In addition to the new ERP system, JD Edwards Enterprise 1, we are implementing a few other software packages for increased productivity and customer service.

- Report Writer – a new report writing software that is designed to integrate seamlessly with E-1. This will allow us to proficiently get to our information at levels we were never able to achieve before, greatly expanding our reporting capability.
- Customer Portal – this program will allow our customers to log in and self-service their account, enabling them to access their tickets, view their account, and reprint invoices. Soon, we plan to add the functionality to make payments on their account directly from the portal.
- Intellichief – a new accounts payable invoice routing, coding, and approval program. All invoices will be scanned and located within this software, eliminating the need for multiple emails and phone calls to track down and code “lost” items.

We are a customer-oriented company, and these upgrades are just one step in helping us better serve our customers, both external and internal.
